

Per Bloch

But I am Still Here

Jeg er her jo stadig

A warm and life-affirming novel about life's small and great challenges and wonders—its nudges and pats on the back—told from the perspective of an 11-year-old.

Per Bloch is a Danish author and musician and this is his first novel for children.

SYNOPSIS

Bror is a sensitive and somewhat cautious boy with a favorite toe, a vivid imagination, and a great many thoughts about life, popcorn, and the world around him. Not least about the older sister Bror never got to know, because she died before he was born.

One day, Bolette moves into the house next door, and when she also starts in Bror's class, a friendship develops between the two that slowly teaches Bror to open up to life and take his place in the world - even when it confronts him with difficult choices, such as whether to join Bolette and her family on a canoe trip.

Be warned: Bror is a boy who walks straight into your heart and stays there.
